I am a 65 year old semiretired rural gp who combines ED work with giving rural gps holiday relief . I am regularly involved in corridor teaching in the ED but nothing formal .It strikes me that the new system of 50 hours per year which has to be privately funded is not user friendly for medical nomads like myself . In my former practice where I spent 30 odd years it would have been possible although unnecessarily burdensome adding further paperwork to an already busy week . Many people in my position will just put it into the too hard basket and retire thus further compromising a stressed workforce . I understand the need for protection of the public from poor medical practice but I feel this solution has no evidence and will not achieve the desired outcome .
